Interesting Talk With Newton Hatch and Kenneth Jackson.

FACTS THAT ARE WONDERFUL

From a canvas tent pitched on the bleak apartments in a hotel like the Shoreham people hereabouts, but this is what has Mr. Newton Pierson Rice Hatch of Nome City, Alaska, who were in Washington yesterday. Both are lawyers, and in the brief period of two years have been through all the various phases of possession, from the ownership of well-worn copies of Chilty and Cooley to check books backed up by deposits of hundreds of thousands of dollars. The changes, kaleidoscopic as they have been, have in no manner disturbed the natural placidity of the two gentlemen. They proceed to the appetizing discussion of teal ducks stuffed with olives and such delightful things with no more enthusiasm than they approached, ere fortune favored them, to the gastric environment of salt horse and flapjacks, eaten with two-tined pewter forks, or, more occasionally, the five-tined natural uplifters of provender that grow at the ends of their arms.

Appointed by Cleveland. Judge Jackson, who is a stalwart Texan, losely resembling Representative Joe Baibelieved, and who is now only twenty-eight years old, went to Alaska several years ago as United States commissioner, secured through Senator Chilton's influence from President Cleveland. Like many other from President Cleveland. Like many other men who are sent officially to that far-off country and appreciate its advantages for individual effort in their own behalf Judge Jackson resigned, and, mixing law with mining, proceeded to help develop the rich territory. He had his ups and downs, especially his downs, and during one of these depressions a couple of years ago he went to the Cape Nome country, then in its almost virgin state. Here he met Mr. Hatch, also a lawyer, and until then the only one most virgin state. Here he met Mr. Hatch, also a lawyer, and until then the only one in that country and an Alaskan of but a year's experience. A coalition was formed between the two for mutual advantages, professionally and, as it happened, capital-intecable.

In the defiles of the mountains lying back of Nome City hardy prospectors with picks and shovels, pans and cradies, tents and limited grub stakes, discovered gold in remarkable quantities. Angle creek, now so famous, and other streams paralleling it both longitudinally and in treasure, held in the sands and gravel along their sides pre-cious shining particles that gave riches t those who sought them.

How Nome City Grew.

As soon as the tremendous deposits were Cape Nome, as the country was called, and ing, defined the boundaries of the district, established the dimensions of claims and organized as such suddenly created communities do for self-protection both as to life and property. The dimensions of the claims were made generous in comparison to those in the Klondike, being fixed by the miners themselves at the United States government size of 1.320 by 600 feet, or twenty acres. Claims were taken up in great numbers, a recorder's office was established, where the claims were recorded, missionary, who was engaged in christianizing the natives," said Mr. Hatch.

"It was very soon developed that the deposits on the Yukon around Dawson were meager in comparison with those around Nome City. There are two great gold creeks at Dawson, the Eldorado and the Bonanza.

"There are half a dozen infinitely richer in our country, besides the tremendous richness of the sand and gravel which forms the beach of Bering sea. The cheapness of getting out the gold in our country is another element in its favor. The cost is about 6 per cent of the output. In other words, it requires only an expenditure of about $600 to secure $10,000 worth of gold, and this expense covers all the dead work. The rate of wages out there for laborers on the claims is $10 a day and board, the latter costing about $3.50 per day.

Made $150 a Day.

Made $150 a Day.

"I had sixteen men working for me on a claim on Basin creek, when the discovery was made that the sand and gravel on the beach was full of gold. Fourteen of them left at once and rushed to the beach. Two of them in a week took out $1,800 or $150 of them in a week took out $1,800 or $150 a day apiece. This is only one instance. There are scores like it.

"The gold is found in ruby sand," and here Mr. Hatch showed the reporter a four-ounce bottle containing the sand, of a dark, somewhat purplish color, in which bright gleams of tiny gold grains could be seen. "There is about $4 worth of gold in that sand. Here is the kind of gold it is, and he produced a smaller bottle of the precious stuff. It was in grains mostly, from the size of a pin head to several times such.

from the size of a pin head to several times such.

"Our gold is worth about $19 an ounce," continued Mr. Hatch. "The commercial companie: and banks and merchants took thousands upon theusands of ounces of this gold in business at $16 an ounce and made enormous profits from it. "There is one claim, known as No. 1 Below," said Mr. Hatch. "that, has a pay streak four hundred feet wide. The pay sand along the beach extends for forty miles. All that is required to get the gold is to shovel up the sand and gravel and put it in a rocker or cradle and water and muscle do the rest.

Preparing for the Coming Rush. "Cape Nome is on Bering sea, 3,500 miles from Seattle, and is reached by water. One steamer, the Rosnoke, makes the trip from Seattle in ten days but the others require fifteen days. Theo coming year, however, there will be other steamers on the route there will be other steamers on the route equal to the Rodnord Every available bottom on the Pitchië Coast has been engaged for the Cape Notice traffic the coming season, and boats are under charter at New York to make the trip' around Cape Horn and enter the same trade.

"Landing at Notice City." he continued. "Is possible only by small boats or by barges, the beach being too shallow and the surf too high to prevent vessels coming in."

Plenty of Work for Willing Ones.

"Yes," he resumed our reply to The Star reporter's question, "There will be plenty of work in that country next year, and for many years, for those willing to work. The country has been merely scratched. With practically crude appliances and with no systematic work, the Cape Nome district practically crude appliances and with no systematic work, the Cape Nome district produced over $4.000.000 in gold this year. The presence of gold on the beach was not discovered until the latter part of last July, yet $1,590.000 in gold was taken from the sand. There is a very peculiar thing about that beach. When there is a strong south wind the waves of Bering sea deposit on the surface of the beach, just as the Atlantic's waves do at Atlantic eity, for Instance, a covering of the ruby sand, that gives from 25 cents to $1 in gold to a pan. Quartz and pebbles, rounded smooth by the sea action, are washed in like marbles.

Mr. Hatch's Theory.

Mr. Hatch's Theory.

Now, my theory of the presence of this mind you it is only a theory, is that somewhere back in the mountains is the original deposit of gold. In the course of time at-

as well as many transfers from original owners to later comers by means of bills of sale, deeds and so forth.

After the immense richness of the district was established the natural sequence common to new camps occurred. Newcomers came and endeavored to possess themselves of claims already taken up and denied the legality of locations by the original claimants. To protect their holdings the miners engaged Messrs, Jackson and Hatch, who had already staked out valuable claims themselves, and the firm waxed optient in fees. It is 'zelleved that their income from this source alone during the past twelve months has been in the neighborhood of $300,000. As miners, however, they have done still better, as in the neighborhood of $300,000. As miners, however, they have done still better, as Judge Jackson recently disposed of one of his claims for the comfortable sum of $60,000, and, together, they have others left to fail back on if necessary.

The mission of the gentlemen to Washington is for the purpose of securing from Congress a code of civil laws for Alaska which will assure the permanent safety of property and prevent trespass upon mining claims and other possessions. They were before the committee on territories of the House yesterday and feel hopeful that the object of their coming will be gained.

Golconda Tales Are Tame.

In conversation with a representative of The Evening Star yesterday Mr. Hatch described the conditions in and around Cape Nome in such a way as to make the well-remembered tales of Golconda seem ame by comparison.
"The existence of gold in the Cape Nome proportions washed up on the sand when a south wind blows!

Cape York Country Promising. "The claims on the beach are thirty feet square, this size being determined by the right to take up access a claim, providing it is not already being worked. One hundred and twenty piles worked. One hundred and twenty piles west of Cape Nome is Cape York. The beach conditions are precisely similar those at Cape Nome, and the surface indications along the creeks back of it are also like ours."

"Mr. Hatch and I own forty or fifty of the best claims up there, said Judge Jackson, who came in at this juncture. Then he added, "There seems to be a general impression that southeastern Alaska comprises all there is in the territory. It will pression that southeastern Alaska com-prises all there is in the territory. It will be proven before long that northern Alaska is the real territory. We can cast ten votes to their one, and the next election of a delegate will show it."

Steep Prices Prevail. "How are prices out at Cape Nome?" Mr. Hatch and Judge Jackson exchanged

"There is nothing less than two bits, or a quarter, as you call it east, in our country. We have two newspapers there—the Nome News and the Nugget. They come out when they feel like it. Each is a fourpage sheet, and they are sold at four bits—50 cents, you know, a paper. The advertising rates are out of sight. Drinks are four bits each. When we left lumber was $250 a thousand; soft coal was $85 a ton;
wood, such as is washed up on the beach,
was $35 a cord. Coffee is a dollar a pound;

meat, such as beef and mutton, the same a pound; sait meats of inferior quality—sides, you know—from 35 to 60 cents a pound. You see, it costs to live out there, but then one gets plenty out of the sand and gravel to pay expenses."

"How long does the working season last?"
"Three months," was the response; "but as it is daylight for twenty-four hours, the period is really six months for work, which is continued all the time. Winter weather? is continued all the time. Winter weather? Well, the thermometer frequently touches 60 degrees below zero and very high winds prevail. The now often covers a house completely. The force of the wind is so strong sometimes that it packs the snow almost as solidly as ice. During the daylight season, however, the climate is very good—very much like your October weather."

Estimate for Next Year. Mr. Hatch is also a young man and is native of Minnesota. He has been in Alas ka three years. Both gentlemen stated, it may be said in conclusion, that conserva tive estimates placed the gold output of the Cape Nome country for 1900 at between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000.

"The former figure can be relied on for a certainty." they declared.

Some New Wrinkles That Are Coming Into English Fashions.

Cravats will be smaller, thanks to the great popularity of the high-handed turn-down collar, and the colored shirt. In all hands the borders are of moderate width, in ties they are quite neat and in imperials they are huge. In all solid-colored cravats the new shades appear. These will form no inconsiderable part of the season's sellings. Where units are used they are small and closely spaced, and in finer goods they are shadowed.

In looking over the best lines, you will find that in the finer grades neat effects predominate, and in the lower priced grades bold effects are most popular. Stripes will be very good. They are shown in groups, in hair lines and in great broad bars.

The sale of white neglige shirts made of fine madras with white effects, or of mat Oxford or linen, has been very large. This shirt promises to be the feature of next spring's business. They are made with a linen neckband, neat single pleat in from and cuffs attached. The cuffs are three and one-half inches deep and have rounded tips. In fancy negliges the up and down stripe has the field almost exclusively. There is nothing that seriously contests its great predominancy.

Evening socks are no longer plain, as for so long. On the contrary, the proprietors of one of the smartest sundries houses in London are precisely the people who are showing the most violent patterns and colors. A pair of silk socks, in a strong but most agreeable red, with a thin and infrequent white line, particularly adorns their show window; and a very blue pair, in the same design, also won my esteem. Elsewhere myrtle green, with tiny old gold fleur-de-lis and gold clocks, and plain myrtle green with only white clocks were well liked by fashionable men. Even our day socks, which nobody sees, are breaking out into big patterns.

I saw some pajamas the other day which were made for a man with ideas of his own on dress. The garments were of the finest out in the same were of the f d white. The frogs were of a special sign and were made of heavy black silk

A very useful garment lately worn by some men in England who still adhere to cycling as a pastime, and also by country doctors who find a wheel a genuine help in obeying emergency calls, is a sort of compromise between riding breeches and gaiters. It is, in fact, a pair of trousers cut very snug to the legs below the knee, and extended over the shee, so as to form cut very snug to the legs below the knee, and extended over the shoe, so as to form gaiters, and to buckle under the sole by means of straps exactly like those on ordinary "spats." These things are much smarter-looking than knickers and stockings—they are warmer, and they make it quite easy to wear underpants, which is hardly to be accomplished with knickers and stockings. Of course, ordinary shoes can also be worn with them, while in stockand stockings. Of course, ordinary shoes can also be worn with them, while in stockings anything but a low shoe looks awk-ward. But, indeed, the few smart men who low ride a wheel are practically never seen now ride a wheel are practically never seen in knickers. They use riding breeches and box-cloth leggings, just as for horseback. The particular coat which is coming into London styles is made of a fairly dark check material, with some green of a subduced kind in the mixture. There is a large overrunning pattern formed by lines of a darker brown than any of the mixture yarns, or else of red. These lines run vertically and horizontally, and form outline squares of three inches or so a side. They are not unduly conspicuous. The cloth, are not unduly conspicuous. The cloth, though soft, is rough in texture. The coat though soft, is rough in texture. The coat is very long, so as to protect the legs well. It reaches to within a foot of the ground, and buttons well up at the front. It is single-breasted and sleeveless, furnished with large patch pockets and covered by huge flaps. The cape is full and reaches to the wrist when allowed to hang over the straight arm; in other words, it falls to a line some inches below the hip. The pockets do not slant. The cape is fixed; it does not come off, and it is buttoned down by a tab on the middle of the back. There may or may not be cloth loops inside to put the arms through in rough, windy weather. This point will depend on the fancy of the weater. The lining is of dark, plain cloth. The name of the whole garment, a "Macfarlane."
